WMU student challenges Griffin in 66th

Candidates for state rep differ on governor's handling of pandemic

By BECKY KARK
For The Herald-Palladium

Beth Griffin and Abigail Wheeler both reside in Mattawan.

But for the most part that's where the similarities end for the 66th District state House candidates.

Wheeler, a Democrat, hopes to deny incumbent Republican Griffin a third term in the Nov. 3 election.

When Wheeler, 21, isn't attending classes at Western Michigan University, where she is a senior, she is serving as a firefighter and EMT for Texas Township Fire Department, and as a volunteer firefighter for Mattawan, while also serving as a council member for the village of Mattawan.

When asked why she is seeking the 66th district seat, she said, "Our current representation is lacking. My motivation to run for public office came from a desire to increase government accountability and transparency. We deserve a representative who will work for us, not special interest groups or her corporate backers. Two years ago, I was the highest vote-getter in the local election to serve on the non-partisan Mattawan Village Council. In that role, I have worked across the aisle to find common-sense solutions to the problems facing our community. I will bring that same approach to problem-solving to Lansing."

GRIFFIN

WHEELER

Griffin, 54, is a former teacher, and said the future of her children as her reason for seeking a final two-year term.

"I began my public service career in order to show my kids what it means to be an engaged citizen," she said. "I continue my efforts for the same reason, but also to help Michigan continue to be a place where healthy communities prosper. I want my kids to eventually choose to stay here and raise their own families."

A number of pressing issues face Michigan as Griffin seeks re-election.

"The challenge before us today is this: What next?" Griffin said. "I continue my work on my water quality bill package, and improving rural broadband for West Michigan, but most of our efforts are focused on helping Michigan families recover from the pandemic shutdown."

Currently, Griffin said she is working with the governor's office and alongside the Senate to provide transitional policies to help Michigan residents toward a healthy and safe recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic.

"The House and Senate are actively collaborating with the University of Michigan's epidemiologists, and the Michigan Medical Society, and health departments to analyze the data which will drive decision-making moving forward," she said.

In other coronavirus-related legislation, Griffin said she has voted to extend unemployment benefits through the end of 2020, create better service for unemployment claims and fraud claims, appropriate an additional $5 million to

School, health officials issue COVID plea to community

If virus spikes enough, in-person learning is threatened, they write in letter

By LOUISE WREGE
HP Staff Writer

Local schools are doing a great job of containing COVID-19, but a rise in community spread puts in-person learning in danger, school and health officials warned Thursday in an open letter addressed to the community.

Gillian Conrad, communications manager with the Berrien County Health Department, said several school officials talked to her about their concerns during their weekly meeting.

"Our community context really does matter for what happens for our schools being able to maintain in-person learning," she said. "... People need to understand that what we do outside of work or outside of school matters for what is happening with our schools."

She said they are asking everyone in the community to help stop the spread of the virus by wearing face masks, social distancing and washing their hands frequently.

"We really are in this together, and the actions that you and I are taking have an impact on a lot of other people beyond just ourselves," she said. "We have to continue to keep that community mindset."

She said the health department isn't recommending that schools switch to remote learning yet, but it is an option if COVID-19 numbers in the community don't start to plateau.

"A lot of parents in Berrien County rely on the fact that their children are able to go to school in person so they can work," she said. "We know that schools being open helps sustain our local economy."

Shoreham trustees keep heat on village president

Auditor still hasn't been given full access to records

By LOUISE WREGE
HP Staff Writer

SHOREHAM — Shoreham trustees ordered the village president to give them administrative access to all financial accounts after the forensic auditor they hired last month reported that he was only given two-thirds of the documents he had requested.

The auditor from Plante Moran told trustees via email shortly before their Wednesday meeting that he was still waiting for access to the village's Staples and Lowe's accounts. President Pro Tem Renata Mais said they have been asking for information on those accounts since March.

When contacted after the meeting, President Bruno Trapikas said he did not give the forensic auditor access to the Staple's and Lowe's accounts because the trustees did not specifically vote on a resolution telling him to do so. He said he would supply access to the trustees and the auditor "soon."

Mais said the problem is that Trapikas and his wife, village Clerk Debra Trapikas, have handled most of the village's finances out of their home for the past four years. Even when the village has a treasurer, she said Bruno Trapikas maintains most of the financial duties, with the treasurer acting as a figurehead. The village's most recent treasurer resigned last month. The clerk is an elected, non-voting position. Debra Trapikas was absent Wednesday due to illness.

Bruno Trapikas said he has no choice but to do the treasurer's duties because no one else is willing to do them. He previously said he had to keep some of the duties under the most recent treasurer because that person didn't have time to do them all.

During the meeting, Trustee Mike Schnable said there is too much power concentrated in one household.

"We have only the clerk and the president in control of all revenue and expense accounts (and) all records, both electronic and physical, and there's no other access to that except through them," he said. "... Right now, if anything happens to the president and the clerk, the government shuts down because the rest of the council and the village have no access to any of the records."

Mais said that money is being wasted because the village is paying the forensic auditor $250 per hour as he waits for access to the accounts.

During the almost five-hour meeting, trustees also created a finance committee to provide financial oversight and to make sure the forensic auditor from Plante Moran receives the information he needs as he investigates alleged mismanagement of village finances.

Schnable said another problem is that the accounts are set up as personal accounts instead of as business accounts. He said the finance committee can change that.

Mais said that since Trapikas took over as president in 2016, Trapikas has also made changes to several policies, putting the president in charge of various committees instead of the treasurer.

Trustees approved changing several policies, to put the treasurer in charge.

Trustees discussed hiring Plante Moran to do the village's accounting until a treasurer can be found, but didn't like the contract from the company because it was open ended on how much money the village would be charged each month. No one from Plante Moran spoke during the meeting.

A special meeting was set up for 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 29, via Zoom to discuss possibly hiring Plante Moran to handle the village's financial records. How to participate can be found on the village website at www.shorehamvillagemi.org.

Whitmer signs bills to protect businesses from virus lawsuits

By DAVID EGGERT
Associated Press

LANSING — Gov. Gretchen Whitmer on Thursday made Michigan businesses and other employers immune from lawsuits filed by customers or workers who contract the coronavirus, as long as they have followed all safety protocols.

She also codified rules retroactively shielding hospitals and other medical providers from pandemic-related lawsuits except in cases of willful misconduct or gross negligence, from late March to mid-July, in the wake of a state Supreme Court decision invalidating her executive orders.

Another newly signed law, which is similar to one of the orders, prohibits employers from retaliating against employees who stay home because they have been exposed to COVID-19.

"I look forward to more collaboration with the Legislature where we can find common ground," the Democratic governor said in a statement after signing the legislation. The Michigan Chamber of Commerce and AFSCME Council 25, a union, applauded the step.

"With these protections, our job providers will have peace of mind that if they act responsibly

GOP-led Senate panel advances Barrett as Democrats boycott

By LISA MASCARO and MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Judiciary Committee Republicans powered past a Democratic boycott Thursday to advance Amy Coney Barrett's Supreme Court nomination to the full Senate, keeping President Donald Trump's pick on track for confirmation before the Nov. 3 election.

Democratic senators refused to show up in protest of the GOP's rush to install Trump's nominee to replace the late Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. Never has the Senate confirmed a Supreme Court nominee so close to a presidential election.

All 12 Republicans on the committee voted in favor of Barrett, a conservative judge. No-show Democrats left behind posters at their desks of Americans they say have benefited from the Affordable Care Act, now being challenged at the high court. Senators plan to convene a rare weekend session before a final confirmation vote expected Monday.

"Big day for America," Trump tweeted after the committee vote.

Barrett, 48, would lock a 6-3 conservative court majority for the foreseeable future. That could open a new era of rulings on abortion access, gay marriage and even the results of this year's presidential election.

Republicans have bristled at Democrats' claim that the Obama-era health law, known as "Obamacare," is in jeopardy if Barrett joins the court. But Trump told CBS' "60 Minutes" that "it will be so good" if the court puts an end to the law. The court is set to hear a Trump-backed case against the health overhaul on Nov. 10.

"I think it'll end. I hope that they'll end it," Trump said in comments released Thursday by the White House before the interview airs Sunday.

As the Senate committee met, protesters, some shouting "Stop the confirmation!" demonstrated outside the Capitol across the street from the Supreme Court. Some dressed as handmaids, a reference to Barrett's role in a conservative religious group that once called high-ranking women members "handmaids." Other demonstrators had "#SupportAmy" signs.

The protesters drowned out Democratic senators who had called a news conference to decry what they called a "sham" confirmation process.

Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer of New York said the Senate's Republican majority "is conducting the most rushed, most partisan and the least legitimate nomination to the Supreme Court in our nation's history."

"Democrats will not lend a single ounce of legitimacy to this sham vote," he said. Unable to stop the confirmation, Democrats have been trying unsuccessfully to stall the process so the winner of the White House race could name the new nominee.

Plot thickens over origins of pope's civil union endorsement

By NICOLE WINFIELD
Associated Press

Gregorio Borgia / AP

Pope Francis, center, makes the sign of the cross during his weekly general audience in the Paul VI hall at the Vatican on Wednesday. Pope Francis endorsed same-sex civil unions for the first time as pope while being interviewed for the feature-length documentary "Francesco," which premiered Wednesday at the Rome Film Festival.

VATICAN CITY — Questions swirled Thursday about the origins of Pope Francis' bombshell comments endorsing same-sex civil unions, with all evidence suggesting he made them in a 2019 interview that was never broadcast in its entirety.

The Vatican refused to comment on whether it cut the remarks from its own broadcast or if the Mexican broadcaster that conducted the interview did. And it didn't respond to questions about why it allowed the comments to be aired now in the documentary "Francesco," which premiered Wednesday.

In the movie, which was shown at the Rome Film Festival, Francis said gay people have the right to be in a family since they are "children of God."

"You can't kick someone out of a family, nor make their life miserable for this," the pope said. "What we have to have is a civil union law; that way they are legally covered."

Those comments caused a firestorm, thrilling progressives and alarming conservatives, given official Vatican teaching prohibits any such endorsement of homosexual unions.

While serving as archbishop of Buenos Aires, Francis had endorsed civil unions for gay couples as an alternative to same-sex marriages. However, he had never come out publicly in favor of legal protections for civil unions as pope, and no pontiff before him had, either.

One of Francis' top communications advisers, the Rev. Antonio Spadaro, insisted the pope's comments were old news, saying they were made during a May 2019 interview with Mexican broadcaster Televisa.

"There's nothing new because it's a part of that interview," Spadaro told The Associated Press as he exited the premiere. "It seems strange that you don't remember."

But Televisa didn't air those comments when it broadcast the interview – nor did the Vatican when it put out its recordings of it. The broadcaster has not commented on the intrigue.

The Vatican frequently edits the pope in official transcripts and videos, especially when he speaks on sensitive issues. Yet some version of the footage was apparently available in the Vatican archives, which were opened to filmmaker Evgeny Afineevsky.

Televisa has not confirmed that the comments were made during its interview, in which the pope insisted that "I always defended doctrine," in opposing same-sex marriage in Argentina. The Televisa interview cuts there.

The documentary doesn't include that quote, but instead used a previously unpublished one about his support for a law governing same-sex civil unions, or "a law of civil cohabitation" as he called it. But the scene of the documentary is identical to the Televisa interview, including the yellow background, a chair in the corner and slightly off-center placement of the chain of Francis' pectoral cross.

The official 2019 Vatican News transcript of that interview, as well as the official Vatican edit, contains no comment on the need for legal protections for civil unions.

Trump posts unedited '60 Minutes' interview before it airs Sunday

By DAVID BAUDER and JILL COLVIN
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — President Donald Trump took on the country's most influential news program in unprecedented fashion, posting unedited video of interviews that he and Vice President Mike Pence gave to "60 Minutes" before its broadcast this weekend.

The video released Thursday shows an increasingly agitated president parrying with interviewer Lesley Stahl on issues like the coronavirus, health care and his demeanor on social media before abruptly ending the session.

With Pence, Stahl said the men had insulted "60 Minutes" by giving campaign speeches and not answering questions.

"I feel aggrieved," she said.

The president, in following through on a threat to make the full interviews public, tweeted that the public should compare Stahl's "constant interruptions and anger" with his "full, flowing and 'magnificently brilliant' answers."

"60 Minutes" will have the last word. CBS News said Trump's actions won't change its plans for Sunday's broadcast, when the presidential interview will air, along with a separate one with Democrat Joe Biden.

At the start of the interview, Stahl seemed to set the president aback by asking, "are you ready for some tough questions?"

"Just be fair," the president said.

When Stahl asked him about priorities for a second term and Trump talked about having created "the greatest economy in the history of the country," Stahl immediately broke in.

"You know that's not true," she said.

Trump objected and said she wouldn't address Biden in the same manner.

Stahl – who, like Trump, was hospitalized with COVID-19 but recovered – said she could not believe that after a Rose Garden event that led to several people coming down with the virus that the president was not strongly encouraging people to wear masks at his campaign rallies.

"We tell people to wear masks," Trump said.

"No, you don't," Stahl answered.

She also hit a Trump trigger point by commenting, "you used to have bigger rallies." The president objected to the characterization and complained Stahl was being negative.

Trump brought up unproven allegations against Biden's son, Hunter, and his work overseas, saying that "it's one of the biggest scandals we've ever seen and you're not covering it."

"Because it can't be verified," Stahl said.

She asked Trump about his demeanor on social media and whether he felt responsible for deep divisions between Americans. "It's just attack, attack, attack, attack, attack," she said.

"It's not attack," Trump said. "It's defense against attacks."

When an offscreen voice tried to give the two a five-minute warning for the end of the interview, Trump said "I think we've had enough" and walked away. He declined to participate in a brief, planned appearance with Pence.

When she sat down with Pence, Stahl wondered what just happened.

Road to 270: Trump's best path to victory hinges on FL, PA

By JILL COLVIN
Associated Press

Evan Vucci / AP

President Donald Trump waves to the crowd as he walks off stage after speaking at a campaign rally at Gastonia Municipal Airport, Wednesday, in Gastonia, N.C.

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump still has a path to the 270 Electoral College votes he needs to win reelection. But it requires everything to break in his direction a second time.

Persuadable voters in battleground states will need to overwhelmingly swing in his favor. He'll have to win back crucial voting blocs. And his turnout operation will need to dramatically outperform Democrat Joe Biden's in an extraordinarily turbulent year.

"In 2016, his chances of winning the election were those of drawing an inside straight in poker. ... The question this year is whether he can draw an inside straight two hands in a row," said Whit Ayres a veteran Republican pollster. "It is theoretically possible but practically difficult."

While Trump has multiple roads to victory, his most likely route hinges on winning two crucial battleground states: Florida and Pennsylvania. If he can claim both and hold onto other Sun Belt states he narrowly carried in 2016 – North Carolina and Arizona – while playing defense in Georgia and Ohio, which he won handily in 2016 but where Biden is now competitive, he will win.

Trump's campaign is also continuing to pour time and money into Wisconsin and Michigan, longtime Democratic strongholds he flipped his way by the slimmest of margins four years ago, while trying to defend Iowa and Maine's second congressional district and grab Nevada and Minnesota, two states his 2016 rival Hillary Clinton narrowly won.

Trump's campaign points to other factors pointing in their favor: The campaign and the Republican Party have spent years investing in a powerful voter outreach operation and have 2.5 million volunteers knocking on millions of doors each week. They have seen spikes in GOP voter registration in several keys states. And Trump voters are more enthusiastic about their candidate than Democrats are about Biden. The Democrats are driven more by their hate for Trump.

"We feel better about our pathway to victory right now than we have at any point in the campaign this year," Trump's campaign manager, Bill Stepien, told staff on a conference call this week. "And this optimism is based on numbers and data, not feel, not sense."

But polling shows Trump trailing or closely matched in nearly every state he needs to win to reach 270 Electoral College votes. Barring some kind of major upset, Trump needs to hold onto at least one of the three rustbelt states he won in 2016: Pennsylvania Wisconsin or Michigan, said Paul Maslin, a longtime Democratic pollster based in Wisconsin.

"I don't see any other way for Trump to do this," he said.

Fox News polls released Wednesday show Biden with a clear advantage in Michigan and a slight one in Wisconsin. In Pennsylvania, recent polls show Biden ahead but vary on the size of his lead.

For all of that, though, Trump's team can draw comfort from this historical footnote: In all three states, Clinton led in the polls in the final weeks of 2016.

BERRIEN COUNTY TRIAL COURT

Woman charged in July death of motorcyclist

By JULIE SWIDWA
HP Staff Writer

ST. JOSEPH — A Three Oaks woman who allegedly drove her car into the path of a motorcycle has been formally charged with the motorcyclist's death.

Joyce Collins, 87, was arraigned in Berrien County Trial Court this week on a charge of moving violation causing death. Stacy Johnson, 23, from Illinois, is the motorcyclist who died. Police said Johnson was not wearing a helmet.

Collins faces up to a year in jail if convicted. Berrien County Prosecutor Michael Sepic said a pre-trial conference is set for Nov. 17.

The accident happened at about 6:45 p.m. July 4 on Red Arrow Highway at Community Hall road in New Buffalo Township.

The Berrien County Sheriff's Office was called, and when deputies arrived, they found an unresponsive woman in the road. Two doctors who'd been passing by were administering CPR.

The woman was taken by Medic 1 to Franciscan Hospital in Michigan City where she was pronounced dead by emergency room doctors, police said.

According to the sheriff's office, investigators at the accident scene determined that Collins was going to Timothy's restaurant in New Buffalo to pick up carry-out food when she turned left into the path of the motorcycle driven by Johnson.

Collins was not injured, police said.

Berrien County sheriff's deputies were assisted by the sheriff's Traffic Crash Reconstruction Unit, New Buffalo police and New Buffalo Township Fire Department.

Sepic said bond was set at $2,000 for Collins, which she posted.

Monitoring finds PFAS in some water in Michigan community

EAST BAY TOWNSHIP, (AP) — State environmental regulators are looking into whether some residents in a northern Michigan community have been using drinking water contaminated with chemicals.

Groundwater monitoring wells have returned elevated results for PFAS – perfluoroalkyl and polyfluoroalkyl substances, the Traverse City Record-Eagle reported.

State and local officials are hosting an online town hall meeting Monday night to explain the discovery and the planned investigation in East Bay Township, outside Traverse City.

Michigan's Department of Environment, Great Lakes and Energy wants to test the private water wells of about 20 homes and one business, and about a half-dozen irrigation wells in the area that remain uncapped.

HARPER WOODS (AP) — A 40-year-old man has been shot and wounded outside a suburban Detroit mall where another man was found shot to death earlier this month.

Police investigating a report of shots fired Wednesday evening found the man in the parking lot of Eastland Center in Harper Woods.

Witnesses told officers the man had been in an altercation with two men prior to the shooting. His condition was not available Thursday. No arrests have been made.

On Oct. 8, a man's body was found in the mall's parking lot and an 18-year-old man was discovered wounded in a car that crashed in a nearby field.

Whitmer, Dems launching 4-day bus tour with Biden's campaign

LANSING (AP) — Gov. Gretchen Whitmer is launching a four-day bus tour across Michigan with Democrat Joe Biden's presidential campaign before the Nov. 3 election.

No passengers will actually be on the bus, due to the coronavirus pandemic. Democrats instead will travel in a caravan of vehicles.

The tour starts Friday in Taylor, a Detroit suburb, with a rally hosted by Lt. Gov. Garlin Gilchrist II and U.S. Rep. Debbie Dingell. Whitmer, a co-chair of Biden's campaign, plans to appear at some events over the four-day period.

The "soul of the nation" tour is designed to promote early voting and boost support not only for Biden but other Democrats on the ballot. Stops will include car rallies, sign distributions, early voting sites, absentee ballot drop boxes and volunteer mobilization events.

Michigan State to increase in-person classes in January

LANSING (AP) — Michigan State University is planning to increase in-person classes and reopen dorms starting in January, but it will skip spring break.

MSU President Samuel Stanley Jr. said in a letter Thursday to students, faculty and staff that the school will offer 400 in-person classes for the spring semester, up from 40 in the fall, to accommodate classes that have to be taught in person. The school will open 2,500 single occupancy residence hall spaces.

"The fall has shown us that our systems and protocols set up for on-campus housing have proven effective and successful, and we are confident we can return more students to our residence halls," Stanley said. "I appreciate your diligent efforts to reduce the spread of the novel coronavirus by wearing your masks and practicing physical distancing. Keep up the great work."

MSU was the first public university in Michigan to halt in-person classes in March and advise students to leave East Lansing and attend from home. However, the college town has seen several student-related spikes in coronavirus cases, most publicly during the summer when nearly 200 cases were linked to Harper's' Restaurant and Brewpub in East Lansing.

Enrollment for MSU this fall was down to 49,695, the lowest it's been for the fall semester since 2011.

MSU's spring semester starts on Jan. 11 and ends April 23.

Suspect sought for armed robbery at Family Farm & Home

By HP STAFF

BENTON TOWNSHIP — Police are asking for the public's help in finding a person they say pulled a gun on a store clerk before fleeing with merchandise.

Benton Township Police Detective Lt. Michael DenDooven said it happened at about 9:40 a.m. Thursday at the Family Farm & Home store on Cinema Way in the township.

DenDooven said in a news release that employees told police a man entered the business, put several clothing items into a shopping cart, approached the cash registers pushing the cart, then pulled a semi-automatic handgun from his waistband and pointed it at a cashier while exiting the store.

Employees described the man as being white or Hispanic and wearing a brown hooded jacket and black pants. They said he got in a silver/gray GMC-Chevrolet full-size sport utility vehicle and fled in an unknown direction, making off with the undetermined amount of merchandise.

Anyone with information is asked to call the Benton Township Police Department Detective Bureau at 925-1135 or Crime Stoppers, 800-342-STOP.

Congestive heart failure: what to expect

Elizabeth Ko & Eve Glazier
Ask the Doctors

DEAR DOCTORS: Our grandfather was diagnosed with congestive heart failure a few years ago. His strength and endurance have declined a lot, and now he's on oxygen. What are some of the signs that his congestive heart failure is advanced?

DEAR READER: When someone has congestive heart failure, it means that the heart muscle, along with the structures of the heart, are no longer able to pump enough blood and oxygen throughout the body to meet its needs. An estimated 6.2 million adults in the United States are living with congestive heart failure, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The condition cannot be cured, but it can be managed with medication, exercise and lifestyle changes. At some point, however, a patient will enter the end stages of heart failure. For family members, and for the patients themselves, it's important to be able to identify the symptoms.

Shortness of breath, which is often present even in the early stages of congestive heart failure, becomes progressively more pronounced as congestive heart failure advances. A patient often finds they are short of breath not only during activity, but also while at rest. When this occurs, the use of supplemental oxygen, as in your grandfather's case, can help to relieve symptoms. Addressing shortness of breath also helps to allay the fear and anxiety that quite understandably arise when someone is struggling to breathe.

When the ability of the heart to pump blood throughout the body declines, it results in swelling due to a buildup of fluid in the tissues, which is known as edema. This swelling is often first observed in the feet, ankles and lower legs. As congestive heart failure advances, fluid often builds up in the abdomen and within the lungs. Fluid buildup in the tiny sacs of the lungs, known as alveoli, reduces the surface area needed for oxygen exchange. This contributes to shortness of breath, as well.

As the flow of blood to the body slows down, fatigue becomes increasingly common. At the same time, the brain responds by directing the heart to beat faster. This can result in the sensation of a racing or throbbing heart, and may also contribute to feeling weak and dizzy. The patient may begin to have trouble with balance and become weak enough that they have trouble walking, or even getting out of a chair or bed. As blood flow throughout the body slows down, it triggers a number of chemical changes. These can lead to cognition changes, mental lapses, confusion, memory loss and feeling disoriented.

As with many people who are feeling unwell, people living with advanced congestive heart failure often lose their appetites. The digestive system is receiving less blood, which can lead to feelings of fullness or nausea. Along with this range of physical symptoms, many patients will also experience anxiety and become depressed.

For patients whose health care providers believe that they have less than six months to live, the supportive medical and emotional services offered through hospice care may be a good option. A range of supportive hospice services are covered through Medicare.

Is husband's metaphorical earwax a sign of disrespect?

Carolyn Hax

DEAR CAROLYN: I've been married three years. My husband and I had major communication issues early on, where I felt my opinions were instantly dismissed and he felt constantly criticized.

We almost separated, but with counseling and some hard work to change our destructive patterns, we've been thriving for the last year or two, even during the pandemic.

There is one exception, though. While he really makes a point now of acknowledging my opinions, actually getting his attention in the first place can feel impossible.

He will be reading when I come into a room and start talking to him, and only after I've finished what I'm saying will it become obvious he didn't listen. Or we will be in a conversation, face-to-face, and I will say two related things – he will respond to the second and then ask me a question making it obvious he didn't even hear the first.

The same doesn't apply the other way around; he assumes I turn on my ears when he comes in and starts talking.

He insists he's tried to improve his listening, and there's nothing more he can do because he doesn't realize I'm talking in the first place. Obviously I miss things, too, sometimes. But this happens constantly, and makes me feel like he unconsciously doesn't regard my voice as worthy of his attention.

Am I being over-demanding? He's made major changes to become a more emotionally responsive partner already, and I don't want to expect the impossible. – Metaphorical Earwax

DEAR METAPHORICAL EARWAX: Some people just burrow deep into their own mental wool, and it takes them a while to come out.

Is your husband one of them? I can't say.

But I can say that treating him as if he is – as if he just gets so lost in his head that he needs extra time to become fully present with you – can take a lot of pressure off you and your marriage.

If it's just his wiring or temperament, then you don't have to take it personally (since he'd respond this way to anyone), you don't have to take offense, you don't have to strategize new ways to "get" him to change.

Instead, you merely need to anticipate this and get into the habit of summoning his attention before you launch into whatever it is you want to say – a courtesy we all ought to grant each other anyway – and of waiting that extra beat for him to arrive back on earth.

A bit of a nuisance for you, sure, and maybe not anyone's ideal for an attentive partner – but ideals will break your heart faster than any partner can. And it's still a lot easier to find your own ways to get your own needs met than it is to go out of your mind waiting for accommodations to come to you.

If you're ever unsure where the line is between making reasonable changes and erasing yourself completely, then look to whether you feel contented (the former) or drained (the latter). Also look to a point you make your letter: He's made a significant effort on your behalf already.

That's an inflection point – when somebody cares enough and is invested enough to try to meet you halfway.

BRIDGE

One of the most friendly bridge players was Catherine d'Ovidio from France. She always had a smile on her face and was happy to chat with anyone. Sadly, she died at the end of August at the early age of 61. She is survived by her husband, Pierre, and daughter, Elodie.

D'Ovidio won five world championships and 13 European titles. Today's deal comes from the French victory in the 2010 European Women's Team Championship.

At the other table, after West opened one diamond in third position, Veronique Bessis (North for France) overcalled one spade. She was not willing to risk missing a 5-3 spade fit, and hoped that if they had a heart fit, she would be able to make a takeout double on the second round of the auction. East made a negative double, South raised to two spades, and after two passes, East competed with three diamonds. After two more passes, North bid three spades, which ended the auction. Declarer made an overtrick, losing one diamond and two clubs.

At this table, North preferred an immediate takeout double. Then, on round two, North leapt optimistically to four spades; but in a team match, if you smell a game, you bid that game.

Daniele Gaviard (West) led the heart nine. D'Ovidio (East), after winning with her queen, found the only winning defense: She switched to the club two. West won with her ace and returned the suit. Declarer tried dummy's 10 (not that it mattered), but East won with her queen and played a diamond to her partner's ace: down one.

D'Ovidio will be greatly missed by all who knew her.

Santa Claus won't be coming to Macy's this year

By JOSEPH PISANI
AP Retail Writer

NEW YORK — Macy's said Santa Claus won't be greeting kids at its flagship New York store this year due to the coronavirus, interrupting a holiday tradition started nearly 160 years ago.

More than a quarter of a million people come to see Santa at Macy's in New York each year, the company said, making it hard to create a safe environment during a pandemic. Before taking a picture with the jolly old man, crowds walk in tight quarters through a maze-like Santaland that's filled with Christmas trees, running toy trains and elves in green costumes.

Santa also won't be showing up at its Chicago and San Francisco stores, which have similar Santalands. But he will still appear at the end of the televised Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade, the company said.

With the coronavirus still raging, stores and malls are having to rework their typical holiday strategy, which had been to pack as many people through its doors as possible. Walmart, for example, is holding its Black Friday deals over four weeks, instead of one day.

But the decision by Macy's differs from big mall owners, which will still go ahead with in-person Santa visits by banning kids from sitting on his lap and making sure they stay six feet away from him.

Macy's has been using Santa Claus to draw crowds to its New York store since the early 1860s, calling itself "The Home of Santa Claus" for decades. And Macy's had a starring role in the 1947 film "Miracle on 34th Street," where a girl discovers the real Santa inside the store.

Macy's will be offering a free online experience on its website at the end of November, where families can play games, get a virtual tour of Santa's workshop and take a selfie with Santa.

"Moving to a virtual engagement will safely bring the magic of Santa Claus to children of all ages this year," Macy's said in a statement to The Associated Press.

The 40 quarts of cranberries Ronald Bodtke sold at the Benton Harbor Fruit Market on Friday morning weren't much in terms of volume. But the sale was significant because they were among the first cranberries sold in Southwest Michigan since the early 1900s. "We wanted to do it so people knew Michigan is in the cranberry business," said Bodtke, president of the Michigan Cranberry Council, which was formed in 1992 to spur interest in growing the fruit.

Benton Harbor's girls basketball team is continuing its winning tradition this season, despite the graduation loss of three starters off last year's Class A state runner-up squad. Coach Paul Wilhite's Tigers are currently 10-2, rated No. 10 in the recent Class A coaches' poll and lead the Big Eight Conference with a perfect 7-0 mark. Benton Harbor is averaging 63.6 points per game while allowing only 42.

The new Sodus Township Library will hold an open house Sunday afternoon. The $40,000 brick-and-steel structure at 3776 Naomi Road was opened to patrons in late August. Mrs. Russell Handy, chairman of the library board, said all residents of Sodus Township and the interested public at large are invited to see the new facility. Refreshments will be served by members of the library board. Mrs. Handy said the library has some 3,000 books on its shelves and is adding more. Films, records and periodicals also are available. The librarian is Mrs. Henry Rybicki, assisted by Miss Virginia Handy.

U.S. regulators seek advice on thorny issues as vaccines near

By LAURAN NEERGAARD and MATTHEW PERRONE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With vaccines against COVID-19 inching closer, U.S. regulators took an unusual step Thursday in asking outside scientists: Are the government's standards high enough to adequately judge the shots?

The Food and Drug Administration may have to decide by year's end whether to allow use of the first vaccines against the coronavirus, amid growing public fears that politics are overriding science. Thursday, a federal advisory committee pulled back the curtain on that decision process in daylong discussions to be sure corners aren't cut.

"Vaccine development can be expedited. However, I want to stress that it cannot – and must not – be rushed," Dr. Marion Gruber, director of FDA's vaccine research office, told the advisers.

Gruber said the public scrutiny "is critical to build trust and confidence" in whichever vaccines emerge.

Exactly how much data FDA needs to be sure a vaccine is safe and effective is a key question for the advisers, and one looming as a key vaccine developer, Moderna Inc., announced Thursday the final study of its shot has completed enrollment.

An even tougher question: If the FDA allows emergency use of a vaccine before final testing is finished, will that destroy chances of ever learning just how well those shots – and maybe competitors still being studied – really work?

Any vaccine allowed for emergency use will still be experimental. It may not be clear if the first vaccines prevent people from spreading the coronavirus or just from getting seriously ill, for example. And with multiple shots in the pipeline – made with different technologies that each have pros and cons – the first may not be the best.

FDA's Dr. Doran Fink made clear the agency wants vaccine makers to keep as many volunteers enrolled in their studies for as long as possible to determine long-term vaccine safety and effectiveness.

"Once a decision is made to unblind an ongoing placebo-controlled trial, that decision cannot be walked back and that controlled follow-up is lost forever," Fink said. But asked how to avoid losing that crucial information, he acknowledged: "I don't have any specific remedies to offer at this time."

Thursday's meeting wasn't to evaluate any particular shots. The FDA has pledged to reconvene its advisers to publicly analyze every vaccine before the agency decides its fate.

But it was an opportunity for the FDA to try and assure the public that science-driven vetting of COVID-19 vaccines is happening despite political pressure from the Trump administration and the unprecedented speed at which the shots are being researched. That confidence will be critical to efforts to vaccinate millions of Americans. A recent poll by the Associated Press shows only 46 percent of those surveyed want to get a COVID-19 vaccine and another 29 percent are unsure.

Interest was so high, FDA aired the meeting on YouTube.

How much evidence is needed?

FDA is requiring manufacturers to do studies of at least 30,000 people to prove if a vaccine protects and how safe it is. Those studies must include adequate numbers of people at highest risk from COVID-19 – older adults, minorities and anyone with other health problems.

FDA has made clear that any vaccine must be at least 50 percent effective. And while the studies are designed to run for two years, companies may get enough evidence the shots are protective – in at least some people – to stop the trials early and seek what's called an "emergency use authorization" for wider vaccinations.

Despite White House objections, the FDA told vaccine makers earlier this month not to seek that speedier review until they've tracked at least half their trial volunteers for two months. With other vaccines, that's about the amount of time when major side effects crop up.

the Secretary of State to reopen walk-in services, and extend the Open Meetings Act to allow local municipalities to stay safe while conducting necessary functions.

Wheeler also pointed to the coronavirus pandemic as being a leading challenge for Michigan.

"We are still dealing with COVID and the long-term impacts of this pandemic," she said. "As a first responder, I've seen firsthand the impact of COVID. Re-engaging Michigan's economy needs to prioritize the health of working people. I support mask-wearing. We can't solve the job crisis without having a plan in place for how to keep workers safe. We need to grow the public health sector to add jobs and directly address COVID and begin laying a foundation for growth."

Other pressing issues Wheeler says would address if elected include improving access to health care, making life-saving medications more affordable, along with improving government accountability and transparency.

"We have to ensure people have affordable access to lifesaving medications," she said. "We should put caps on how much insurance companies can charge and make drug companies show every cost so there are no unknowns in pricing."

The candidates are at odds regarding Gov. Gretchen Whitmer's controversial executive orders, which resulted in the shutdown of many businesses and schools from the end of March to the beginning of June to slow the spread of COVID-19.

"I agree with Governor Whitmer's handling of the COVID-19 crisis," Wheeler said. "Her response literally saved people's lives. As a firefighter and EMT, I understand how important it is to take precautions to keep ourselves healthy and safe. ... Moving forward, I would like to see continued investment in the state to help people and small businesses recover from COVID. We need to approve low-interest or interest-free loans to small businesses especially in communities of color."

Griffin takes issue with the governor's handling of the pandemic.

"I disagree with the governor's unilateral approach," Griffin said. "The stakes were extremely high, yet she crippled the government's ability to optimize and problem-solve together by ignoring the legislative branch. This 'go it alone' approach resulted in mass confusion (and) extreme duress for many Michiganders.

"Now that we have won in court and the constitutional balance is restored, we can do our jobs and collaborate toward next steps as the state moves forward," Griffin said, referring to the recent state Supreme Court ruling that nullified the governor's executive orders.

Both candidates do agree on one point regarding the governor – they both were shocked about the recent plot to kidnap Whitmer.

"I'm disappointed such a plot existed. I applaud law enforcement's efforts to stop the attack," Wheeler said.

"The plot to kill the governor was horrible, and I am glad the federal authorities did their jobs," Griffin said.

The candidates do differ about whether people should be allowed to carry guns at, or even into the state Capitol building, something that has occurred several times this year when there were COVID-19-related protests. Two of the plot suspects were at one of the protests earlier this year. Federal law enforcement authorities have also said the suspects involved in the kidnapping plot had also discussed storming the Capitol building and taking people there hostage.

"I do not think it is necessary for people to carry guns at the Capitol," Wheeler said. "No one should feel threatened in a government building where people are communicating their opinions freely, exchanging ideas and advocating for the people they serve."

"I'm open to discussion regarding open carry in the Capitol building," Griffin said. "I do have lingering concerns that the Legislature was not informed of the plot since it involved threats of storming the capitol and taking hostages. This issue highlights the need to always have open and proactive communication between the executive and legislative branches."

A link to the entire letter, which was signed by almost 20 school leaders, can be found on the Berrien County Health Department Facebook page.

Conrad said a big reason the virus isn't spreading in the schools is because the schools are consistently adhering to strict protocols of wearing face masks and frequent hand washing.

"They have done a fantastic job of maintaining a risk-mitigated environment," she said.

When a student or staff member tests positive for COVID-19, she said it can usually be traced back to an encounter outside the school setting.

In addition, she said recent studies have shown that while children are not immune to the virus, they don't contract it as easily and don't tend to be super spreaders.

Updated numbers

Berrien County recorded another COVID-19 death Thursday, bringing the county's pandemic death toll to 80.

The number of recorded COVID-19 cases has continued to rise in Berrien County, with 2,254 total confirmed cases recorded Thursday, up 16 from 2,238 on Wednesday.

There were 301 probable cases listed Thursday, up from 296 on Wednesday, and 1,900 recoveries, up from 1,879 since the county began tracking pandemic information in March.

Spectrum Health Lakeland was treating 21 COVID-19 positive patients at the hospital Thursday, up one from Wednesday.

Cass/Van Buren counties

Cass County recorded 15 new cases on Thursday, bringing its total to 819.

Van Buren County added 21 new cases Thursday, bringing its total to 900.

No new deaths were recorded in Cass or Van Buren counties.

and invest time and money to follow public health protocols, they will be protected from lawsuits related to this pandemic," said a sponsor, Republican Rep. Graham Filler of DeWitt. "Workers will have the peace of mind that they will not be punished for following public health protocols."

The Republican-led Senate and House successfully challenged Whitmer's ability to unilaterally keep in place orders to curb and respond to the virus without legislative approval. Her administration has reinstated mask requirements, size limits on gatherings and other regulations under a different law, though a chiropractor and Christian school sued to block them in the past week.

Whitmer on Thursday also enacted a bill to codify and augment her administration's recently announced changes related to the care of nursing home residents recovering from the virus. A nursing home can be a designated "care and recovery" center to house COVID-19 patients – similarly to current "hub" system – only if it has a federal staffing rating of at least three out of five stars, a distinct area for infected patients and staff who are solely dedicated to treating them.

A person hospitalized with the virus cannot be discharged to a nursing home if he or she has fewer than 72 hours left in his or her isolation period, unless the hospital has reached its surge capacity. A nursing home not deemed a care and recovery center can admit or readmit infected residents if it has a state-approved designated area for them.

Nursing home residents account for 2,222, or 30 percent, of Michigan's 7,464 confirmed or probable deaths related to the virus. Twenty-two workers at such facilities have also died.

Bears roll past Three Rivers to claim championship

VICKSBURG — St. Joseph made quick work of Three Rivers in Thursday's Division 2 boys soccer district championship, winning 8-0 via mercy rule with 15 minutes still on the clock.

St. Joseph 8 Three Rivers 0

The road to the Bears' first district crown since 2014 was a long one, however, with much of the current roster now in its third year of varsity soccer.

"The boys have set the goals, and they've hit two of the goals, a couple more yet to have," St. Joseph coach John Brown said. "Hats off to these guys, they come in to work every single day. I'm pretty fortunate to have this group. They respond, and I've pushed them physically and mentally every day. They get it."

St. Joseph (13-3-1) will return to Vicksburg at 5 p.m. Wednesday to play either Marshall or Battle Creek Harper Creek in the regional semifinals.

Two years ago, the Bears had an extremely young roster, with many sophomores and freshmen coming up to varsity to make up for the lack of seniors.

"That's when we really made the change to our whole atmosphere of the team," senior Jack Pender said. "We bought into the process, and we just kept building it up until now."

"We really had to mature as a team, come together and build that chemistry," added senior Lars Razor.

The Bears were clearly focused from the start on Thursday. Russell Ebbert scored the opening goal less than five minutes in off an assist from Seth Walters.

"We knew we had to come out strong," Pender said. "We weren't going to let this one pass us by. It was just too important to us."

St. Joseph had plenty of variety in its offense, with 10 different players contributing at least one goal or assist.

Ebbert and Jacob Scouler each scored twice, and Razor, Andrew Loikits, Pender and Micah Nolte all found the net once.

Walters led the playmaking efforts with three assists, Owen Monahan contributed two, and Christian Shannon, Rowan Clark and Pender each added one.

"It's a well-balanced team," Brown said. "There's a couple guys that are going to stick out a little bit more than others potentially with stats, but we've been trying to really focus on moving as a team, and I think the last two games the boys have done a really good job with that."

Three Rivers (7-9-2) rarely threatened to score. St. Joseph goalkeeper Preston Nichols made two saves.

"We put a lot of pressure on them," Brown said. "They looked nervous with the ball. Obviously our goal was to press them high, and make it difficult for them from the

No. 18 Michigan faces difficult opener at No. 21 Minnesota

By DAVE CAMPBELL
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Michigan hasn't left Minnesota with a loss since 1977.

This time, the only fans in the seats will be family members of the players, drastically reducing the disadvantage for the visitors.

This is a much different Gophers team than most of those that wilted in the past against the Wolverines, though. This pivotal sixth season with coach Jim Harbaugh for the storied program will finally begin in difficult fashion at No. 21 Minnesota on Saturday night.

Long before the 18th-ranked Wolverines can worry about that next swing at rival Ohio State, they must contend with the Gophers, who won 11 games last season, a mark that Michigan hasn't hit since 2011. The Wolverines will again boast a stout defensive line and a deep group of running backs, but there's plenty to prove in order to end their 16-year drought without a Big Ten title.

"I've never seen any team I've been a part of here come together as much as we have," senior linebacker Josh Ross said. "I'm ready to show everybody how good we actually are."

The Gophers got a lot better when star wide receiver Rashod Bateman had his eligibility reinstated last month, after he initially opted out of the season due to health concerns amid the COVID-19 pandemic. The connection between him and quarterback Tanner Morgan ought to be one of the best in the conference, if not the country.

"Tanner has just grown as a leader throughout this whole quarantine," running back Mohamed Ibrahim said. "He has really good control of Chicago Bears quarterback Nick Foles reaches for the ball during the first half of a game against the Carolina Panthers on Sunday.

Foles, Bears still adjusting as offense struggles to click

By ANDREW SELIGMAN
Associated Press

Nick Foles figured it would take time.

The Chicago Bears made a quarterback switch in Week 3, hoping the Super Bowl 52 MVP could give their struggling offense the lift Mitchell Trubisky could not.

The production hasn't been much better with Foles. But the team continues to win.

Chicago heads into a Monday night matchup with Jared Goff and the Los Angeles Rams with a 5-1 record and the NFC North lead. The Bears are off to their best start since the 2012 team won seven of its first eight games on the way to a 10-6 mark.

For that, they can thank their dominant defense. The offense, on the other hand, ranks among the worst in the NFL. And Foles heads into his fourth start still adjusting.

"I think it's just human nature," said Foles, acquired from Jacksonville in the offseason. "You're with new people, you're with a new offense, you're in a new place, your family just moved. There's a lot of moving parts. Getting the rhythm of where you are and people to understand you and understand how things are going."

Foles had history with coach Matt Nagy and offensive coordinator Bill Lazor, and was familiar with the offense. But in some ways, he's playing catch-up.

The pandemic wiped out offseason workouts as well as exhibition games that would have given him more opportunities to get in sync with his new teammates and coaches. On top of that, he was splitting snaps with Trubisky in camp.

When the Bears decided to go with Foles during their comeback win at Atlanta last month, Nagy understood it would take time to find a rhythm.

"I knew it wasn't going to be like a magic wand where just all of a sudden he comes in and lights it up or does this or does that," Nagy said. "That wasn't going to happen."

The Bears rank 28th overall and in rushing, and they are among the worst in the NFL in yards per play, per run and per pass. Only five teams are averaging fewer points than Chicago at 21.3 per game. The Bears also struggled on offense last season.

Even so, receiver Allen Robinson insisted they're just a few big plays from a breakthrough.

"I think we got dudes who can make plays," he said. "I think we got dudes who've made plays this year and in this league. Like I said before, for me personally breaking down, just as far as creating more explosives will make the offense look a little bit different."

With Aaron Donald potentially bearing down on Foles and Jalen Ramsey lurking in the defensive backfield, this could be a difficult week for Chicago. It's not like the Bears have been making things easy on themselves.

Tucker, Schiano ready for opener between Spartans, Rutgers

By NOAH TRISTER
Associated Press

Mel Tucker is starting a new challenge at Michigan State. Greg Schiano is resuming an old one at Rutgers.

With so much change this past offseason, neither coach necessarily knows what to expect in this weekend's opener.

"As I keep telling the team, whether you're ready or not, we're going to kick the ball off at noon and we need to be ready," Schiano said. "As we get into game week now, I mean, this is it. This is why you coach."

The Spartans host the Scarlet Knights on Saturday in a matchup between two programs that could use a little jolt. Michigan State accomplished a lot during Mark Dantonio's tenure, but the team slipped over the past few seasons and Dantonio retired in February. The Spartans hired Tucker away from Colorado.

"This is the time of the season when you start to get those text messages from your colleagues and friends and family, wishing you all the best for the first game and wishing you all the best for the season," Tucker said. "I reflect on my mentors and people that have had a positive impact on my life on a daily basis. Those are blessings to me."

At the end of Schiano's first stint as coach from 2001-11, Rutgers went to six bowl games in seven years. Now he's back, and some fans are hoping he picks up right where he left off before he became coach of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

That won't be easy. He's taking over a program that has won three games over the past two years.

"I remember growing up in New Jersey and my grandfather used to take me to the games and everything. Just having Coach Schiano back means a lot," linebacker Tyshon Fogg said. "It's a lot of motivation for the guys playing for him."

Uncertainty at QB

Tucker didn't announce a starting quarterback early this week. Michigan State has to replace Brian Lewerke, and Rocky Lombardi is the only holdover with any significant game experience. He attempted just 21 passes last season.

The competition on the Rutgers side is down to Noah Vedral and Art Sitkowski. Vedral, a graduate transfer, played in six games at Nebraska last season. Sitkowski took a redshirt last season after starting 11 games as a freshman in 2018.

No. 3 Irish wary as it hits road to face Pitt

By WILL GRAVES
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Brian Kelly needs more. Too often during a lackluster victory over Louisville last week, the Notre Dame coach watched the third-ranked Fighting Irish going through the motions.

"They have to play with a bit more sense of urgency," Kelly said. "Sometimes the clock's ticking and you need to play with that sense of urgency from the very first play. You learn about those things as we move along."

Kelly hopes it's a lesson that only needs to be taught once. A lethargic performance against Pittsburgh on Saturday and Notre Dame (4-0, 3-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) could find itself quickly ushered out of the College Football Playoff conversations. While the Panthers (3-3, 2-3) have dropped three straight following a 3-0 start, they feature one of the best pass rushes in the nation and have developed a habit under sixth-year head coach Pat Narduzzi of pulling off the occasional stunner.

In 2016, it was a victory on the road at Clemson. In 2017, it was a decisive win over then-second-ranked Miami. Last season it was a heart-stopping last-second triumph over Group of Five darling and 15th-ranked UCF.

"I wish I could tell you I had my magic wand underneath here," Narduzzi said while playfully reaching under the dais. "It's not here ... I mean, there's no magic to it. It's getting your guys prepared mentally, physically."

Doing both has become a bit of an issue for Pitt during its current slide. A pair of

"The losses, they're not really losses, their lessons," Razor said. "We've just got to take them on the chin and move forward."

one-point losses to North Carolina State and Boston College cooled Pitt's early momentum, and senior quarterback Kenny Pickett sat out last week's loss to Miami with an ankle injury.

Pickett is likely out again, meaning freshman Joey Yellen will have to face a defense that's allowed all of five touchdowns in four games. Yellen threw for 277 yards and a touchdown in his Pitt debut but also absorbed three sacks and lost a fumble that led directly to a Hurricane score. A little help from the running game would take some of the pressure off. It hasn't come so far this season for the Panthers, who managed just 22 yards on the ground in Miami.

Still, Kelly is wary.

"They didn't cash some drives in and they had to settle for some field goals, but was very impressed with the way he played as a young player going in there," Kelly said. "The moment didn't look too big for him."

Flag day

Pitt has sometimes beaten itself during its three-game slide. The Panthers have committed 27 penalties for 215 yards over the last three weeks and are among the most penalized teams in the ACC.

"Some of them aren't penalties, I can tell you that," Narduzzi said, later adding, "It's tough to make all those calls out there. I'm not whining."

Notre Dame, by comparison, has been flagged just 13 times all season, fourth-fewest in the nation.

"We've been able to stay away from key penalties late, early or late," Kelly said. "It's benefited us, obviously. I think it's the way our kids handle themselves off the field. I think it's the expectations that we set in the program, and I think it's having veteran players."

Close calls

While Notre Dame has won five of the six meetings with the Panthers under Kelly, the games have been remarkably close. Five have been decided by a touchdown or less, including a 19-14 victory by the Fighting Irish in 2018 in which unbeaten Notre Dame trailed the 3-3 Panthers all afternoon until Ian Book's 35-yard touchdown pass to Miles Boykin with 5:43 remaining.

"They're always going to play Notre Dame hard," Kelly said. "They've got some game wreckers on defense. They're going to get after the quarterback and play physical. ... That'll keep you up at night."

Homecoming for Hinish, Hainsley

The trip to Pittsburgh will be a homecoming of sorts for Notre Dame nose tackle Kurt Hinish and offensive tackle Robert Hainsey. Hinish won a pair of high school regional titles at Heinz Field while playing for perennial powerhouse Central Catholic. Hainsey began his high school career at Gateway High in the eastern suburb of Monroeville before transferring to the IMG Academy.

"The game means everything to me," Hinish said. "I'm good friends with Damar Hamlin and Paris Ford (Pitt's starting safeties). We actually played paintball with each other during quarantine, so we got to hang out with each other. It's friendly competition, but once we step on the field, we mean business."

Air Jordan

Pitt freshman wide receiver Jordan Addison's 38 receptions are tops in the ACC. Notre Dame had Addison in its sights coming out of high school but wanted to transition him to cornerback. Addison chose the Panthers and his play has been one of the few constants on an offense that ranks 12th in the 15-team league in yards and eighth in points.

"We thought early on in our recruiting efforts that he would be a guy that would do well at the cornerback position because of his length," Kelly said. "That's kind of stood out to us but, obviously, he can play other positions as well. We're finding out he's going to be one of the top receivers in this league for a few years."

of get the feel for both of them," Michigan State linebacker Antjuan Simmons said. "We both have new head coaches, completely new staffs, a few new players, so each team is going to look completely new."

Another new start

Schiano had plenty of success in his first stint at Rutgers, but it didn't come immediately. The Scarlet Knights went 3-20 in his first two seasons and they didn't have a winning season until his fifth year. And that was in the Big East, not the Big Ten.

Drought

Rutgers has not won a Big Ten game since 2017, when it beat Illinois, Purdue and Maryland.

Streak

Michigan State has won 21 consecutive home openers. Only Florida (31), Oklahoma State (25), Wisconsin (24) and Illinois (22) have longer streaks.

Special teams

The Scarlet Knights' best player might be punter Adam Korsak. The Australian led the conference and ranked 15th nationally with a net punt average of 41.5 yards. Opponents did not have a return on 56 of his 76 punts last season, and none were blocked. He averaged 43.8 yards and put 31 punts inside the 20-yard line.

this whole team."

Better late than never

First, the Big Ten canceled nonconference games. Then the whole season was off, for about a month, until more stringent virus protocols fueled another revision and this late October start. Regardless of how the conference got here, both teams are eager to get going.

"It really kind of surreal right now," Michigan fifth-year senior defensive tackle Carlo Kemp said. "I'm thankful for this opportunity. They didn't have to change their decision."

This is the first time a ranked Minnesota team will open against an opponent also appearing in the AP poll since 1968, when the Gophers faced USC.

"We were all at home for months. We weren't even able to be around each other. So to start the year off, to be able to play football, is something that we're very grateful for," Morgan said.

The big stage

Minnesota's matchup with rival Wisconsin for the Big Ten West Division title last season lured ESPN's College GameDay to campus, the first time the Gophers hosted the weekly preview show since it began on-location broadcasts in 1993.

Now the network is returning on Saturday for a second straight home game, and this one is the 104th meeting between Michigan and Minnesota with the Little Brown Jug at stake. All but eight of the 65 power conference programs have been picked at least once, with Illinois, Maryland and Rutgers the lone Big Ten teams yet to host.

The virus precautions will take some luster off the scene, with fans not permitted to attend the filming and thus eliminating the eye-catching cardboard sign holding tradition that clever students clamor to take part in around the country.

"It's an event. It's a spectacle. It's a chance for us to be able to put our program, our university, our state on display in front of the whole country," Minnesota coach P.J. Fleck said.

His turn

Michigan junior quarterback Joe Milton is expected to make his first start, hoping four new starting offensive linemen can give him enough time to throw to an inexperienced group of receivers.

"He's made a lot of great strides," Harbaugh said. "Really good command of the offense and savviness – and a lot of talent."

Dylan McCaffrey, the brother of Carolina Panthers All-Pro running back Christian McCaffrey, decided not to return for a fourth year after falling behind Milton on the depth chart. The 6-foot-5, strong-armed Milton played sparingly as a backup the previous two seasons behind Shea Patterson.

Oh, Boye

Minnesota's defensive line has a new look, too, with defensive tackle Micah Dew-Treadway the only incumbent starter. Junior Boye Mafe will take the lead at defensive end, following the departure of Carter Coughlin, one of four players in last year's defensive lineup who became NFL draft picks. Maye, who had three sacks in a backup role last season, credited the coaching staff for his progress.

"They pushed me to go harder with the weights and do more," Mafe said. "I think it's translating over to the field. If you ask me how I feel about my body now compared to freshman year, I couldn't even play then. So it's made a tremendous difference in my game."

Familiar face

The Gophers lost star safety Antoine Winfield Jr. to the NFL, but their secondary has plenty of returning experience. That includes cornerback Benjamin St-Juste, who tied for the team lead with 10 pass breakups last year. The native of Quebec played his first two seasons for Michigan.

Jose Abreu wins AL Outstanding Player award

By MARK GONZALES
Chicago Tribune (TNS)

CHICAGO — Jose Abreu earned the ultimate respect of his peers Thursday as the Chicago White Sox first baseman was named the American League Outstanding Player in the 2020 Players Choice Awards.

Abreu, 33, joins Frank Thomas (1993-94) and Jermaine Dye (2006) as the only Sox players to win the award.

Abreu batted .317 with 15 doubles, 19 home runs, 60 RBIs, and 34 extra-base hits in 60 games this season. He is under strong consideration to earn AL Most Valuable Player honors by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, which will announce the winner on Nov. 12. Thomas (1993-94), Dick Allen (1972) and Nellie Fox (1959) are the only Sox players to win AL MVP honors.

"It is always special to be recognized by my fellow players across the league," Abreu said in a statement. "I want to thank everyone who voted for me and appreciates my respect for the game. But as I have said, my ultimate goal remains to help win a championship for the Chicago White Sox. That would be my greatest accomplishment and one that would make my family the proudest."

Abreu led the league in hits, RBIs, slugging percentage, total bases and extra-base hits.

He was the only player to finish in the top five in the AL in hits, RBIs, slugging percentage, extra-base hits, total bases, home runs, batting average (4th) and OPS (5th, .987). Abreu became the first player to lead the AL in RBIs in consecutive seasons since David Ortiz in 2005-06.

Abreu became the fourth player in major league history to lead the league in hits and RBIs, joining Jim Rice (1979), Carl Yastrzemski (1967) and Lou Gehrig (1931). Abreu also is the first qualifying player to record as many RBIs as games played in a season since the Cubs' Sammy Sosa (160) and the Cleveland Indians' Juan Gonzalez (140) in 2001.

Abreu, who was named The Sporting News Major League Baseball Player of the Year, also is a finalist for the 2020 Hank Aaron Award, given to the top offensive performer during the regular season in each league.

MSU dropping swim and dive teams

EAST LANSING (AP) — Michigan State University is dropping swimming and diving teams for men and women after the 2020-21 season, officials said Thursday.

"MSU athletics is facing a financial crisis unlike any we've ever seen in college athletics," athletic director Bill Beekman and President Samuel Stanley Jr. said, citing the impact of COVID-19. "Our best-case scenario this year projects a revenue shortfall in excess of $30 million. Our worst-case scenario would more than double that number."

No one will lose a scholarship if they remain as students, the university said. Counseling and mental health services will also be available.

The swimming/diving teams cost $2.07 million in 2018-19. Dropping the teams will improve the athletic department's long-term finances, MSU said.

The school said it also has struggled to recruit swimmers because it has a "smaller than regulation pool."

"These are not scenarios created by a national pandemic, but rather an understanding that there is not a reasonable expectation of a better situation in the future. Unfortunately, this all led us to our inevitable decision," Beekman and Stanley said.

Financial donations "will be welcome," they said, but the decision to end the programs "is final."

Raiders place 5 more players on COVID-19 list

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The Las Vegas Raiders placed four starting offensive linemen and safety Johnathan Abram on the reserve/COVID-19 list after they were determined to be close contacts with a teammate who had tested positive for the coronavirus.

Two people familiar with the moves Thursday confirmed that Abram, Kolton Miller, Denzelle Good, Rodney Hudson and Gabe Jackson were all placed on the list because of high-risk contact with right tackle Trent Brown.

The people spoke on condition of anonymity because the moves haven't been announced. NFL Network first reported the players going on the COVID-19 list.

Those five players had close contact with Brown, who was placed on the COVID-19 list Wednesday following a positive test for the virus.

The league and union are also investigating how the Raiders have handled the coronavirus protocols.

20 points. They are the first team with two wins in the same season after trailing by 16 or more in the fourth quarter, according to the Elias Sports Bureau.

The Bears have a combined 126 yards rushing over the past three games after being held to 63 in their win at Carolina.

By comparison, they ran for 414 yards in the first three weeks.

Some of that is on the blocking. The offensive line has struggled the past few games, and the Bears are down a starter with left guard James Daniels (pectoral injury) likely missing the remainder of the season.

As for Foles, he has a 62.5 percent completion rate with 878 yards, six touchdowns and four interceptions. Three of those TDs were in the win over the Falcons. And he has been picked off three times in the three games since then.

Trubisky, the No. 2 pick in the 2017 draft, didn't exactly light it up in his three starts. He completed 59.3 percent of his passes for 560 yards with six touchdowns and three interceptions.

That was enough to convince the Bears it was time to go with Foles.

"Each team's different," Foles said. "It's really just finding out who you want to be and what personalities you want to live in. That's really what we're in the process (of) now."

NOTES: Offensive line coach Juan Castillo was at practice on Thursday. He quarantined and missed the Carolina game after coming in contact with someone away from the team who tested positive for COVID-19.

Free violin concert set for Nov. 1 in NB

NEW BUFFALO — The School of American Music will present "Return of the Fiddlers Two," featuring violinists Zofia Glashauser and Nicolas Orbovich, at 1:30 p.m. Nov. 1 at Converge Community Church, 601 W. Buffalo St.

The concert, part of SAM's Free Family Concert Series, will feature an afternoon of duos by classical French and Hungarian composers.

Glashauser has been concertmaster of the South Bend Symphony Orchestra, and is currently a violinist with the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra.

She has performed for many years with the Michigan City Chamber Music Festival.

Orbovich, co-founder and artistic director of MCCMF, is a Grammy-nominated musician.

He also is a former concertmaster of the South Bend Symphony Orchestra, and was featured in the Emmy Award-winning documentary, "The Sound of Dreams."

Although the concert is free, tickets are recommended.

Tickets are available online at schoolofamericanmusic.com.

The church has socially distanced seating, but limited capacity. Attendees are asked to wear face masks.

TCP presents online radio play next week

ST. JOSEPH — Twin City Players will present "The 39 Steps," an online show, next weekend.

The 50-minute performance will be available at 7 p.m. Oct. 30 and 6 p.m. Nov. 1.

Inspired by Alfred Hitchcock's classic tale, and performed as a live period radio play, this romantic thriller is fast paced.

Richard Hannay is visiting 1930s London when he meets Annabella Smith, who is on the run from foreign agents after a disturbance at a music hall.

Later that night, Annabella is murdered, and Hannay must try to break the spy ring and prove his innocence.

From an epic train chase to a feisty love interest, Hannay has his work cut out for him as he searches for the truth about The 39 Steps.

Tickets are $10, and can be purchased online at twincityplayers.org.

The show is directed by Jacob Holmes. Cast members are Joshua Bennett, Allen Pille, Michael Bond, Sarah Simmons and Cassi File.

Assisting with the production is Benjamin VanRoekel.

ARS Gallery opens exhibit on Fender guitars

BENTON HARBOR — ARS Gallery, 147 Fifth St., will open a new exhibit today.

The exhibit, "You Won't Part With Yours Either: Robert Perine and the Fender Guitar, 1957-1969," will be on display through January.

Perine almost single-handedly designed and produced the advertising for Fender Sales Inc., the Santa Ana, Calif.-based distribution arm of the Fullerton factory, according to a news release.

His ads, which always included photographs and clever copy, graced music trade publications and magazines. His highly successful "You Won't Part With Yours Either" campaign depicted people carrying Fender guitars and amplifiers in a host of unlikely and outrageous settings – while scuba diving, surfing, skydiving, skiing and other adventurous situations.

In Fender guitar literature of the 1960s, attractive, guitar-toting teenagers were posed with surfboards and Perine's classic Thunderbird convertible at local beachside settings, firmly integrating Fender into the surfin'/hot rod/sports car culture of Southern California celebrated by The Beach Boys, beach movies and surf music.

The campaign ran for years. Rather than use a casting agency for actors, Perine saved money by having his daughters scout local kids with modeling talent. The coolness of Laguna kids was a factor in the growing success of Fender guitars in the era of surf music, and rock 'n' roll.

While the exhibit details Perine's role creating the iconic advertising image of Fender guitars, it also will highlight Perine's art and design career, according to the release.

His trained, detailed approach was unique in the music industry, and set standards as Fender grew to dominate musical instrument manufacturing and sales. It was a major influence in creating surf culture.

Perine died of a heart attack in 2004, while working to revive the Chouinard Art Institute. He believed in Nelbert Chouinard's creation, and late in life wrote the retrospective book "Chouinard, An Art Vision Betrayed."

He also provided the design for a book on his biggest client, "Fender: The Sound Heard Round the World," in which an aging Leo Fender makes a thoughtful comment: "What's the use of living if you don't leave something behind that makes the world a better place, something people will remember you for?"

Perine's signed photos from the original negatives will be on display during the exhibit.

SMC to present radio theater: 'Terror on Dewey Lake'

DOWAGIAC — Southwestern Michigan College's first foray into radio theater, "Terror on Dewey Lake," will be available beginning Oct. 30.

Produced and directed by Marcus Roll, SMC's manager of theater operations and applied performing arts, "Terror on Dewey Lake" is an original script by Branden Pompey, SMC's assistant director of campus life.

The satirical horror show, complete with five songs and '60s-style commercials, explores the local legend of a Bigfoot-like creature spotted at Sister Lakes in 1964 – the same year the college and Director of Campus Security and Student Conduct Lyndon Parrish were born.

Parrish, portraying Sheriff Leonard, is the son of real Cass County Sheriff Paul Parrish. In fact, Paul Parrish was a sergeant with the department investigating monster sightings that garnered national attention, according to an SMC news release.

Kiana Blake will voice Becky Leonard in Southwestern Michigan College's production of "Terror on Dewey Lake."

When a beloved town hero, Chet Wilburn (voiced by Josh Bennett of Berrien Center), goes missing, it's up to a group of college students in a van to unravel the mystery.

Kiana Blake of Berrien Springs plays Becky Leonard, the sheriff's daughter, and Danny Cerda of Decatur plays her boyfriend, Tommy Mortimer. Blake, who got into theater at 11, appeared in "Chicago" in 2017, "The Secret Garden" in 2018, and "Sweeney Todd" in 2019. She is seeking a musical-theater career.

Cerda, originally from Hayward, Calif., majors in music education.

For the production, Roll created an orchestra-loft studio, where actors recorded while safely distanced. Jacob Good and Anne-Marie Latourette assisted with sound engineering.

Tommy's brother, Ronald Mortimer, is played by Chase Ehlert of Three Oaks, a River Valley High School alumnus studying music. Ehlert was in grade school when he made his SMC debut in "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" in 2013.

Kyle McGrew is the Mortimer brothers' friend, Ox. McGrew is working toward a performing arts degree.

Maggie Bandstra is among the artists who will be featured in "Series 5" at the Box Factory for the Arts.

Box returns to in-person exhibits today with 'Series 5'

ST. JOSEPH — Five women with distinctly different artistic styles will bring gallery exhibits back to the Box Factory for the Arts, 1101 Broad St.

The exhibits, part of "Series 5," are the first in-house gallery shows since the COVID-19 pandemic forced the Box Factory to close in early March.

The exhibits, which open tonight, will be open for viewing from noon-4 p.m. Fridays to Sundays through Nov. 28.

An opening reception, featuring conversations with the artists, will be streamed via Zoom at 6 p.m. tonight.

Those exhibiting work will be: Michelle Corazzo of Valparaiso, Ind., with a sculpture exhibit titled "Head Menhirs," Carly Norris of Niles with mixed media art titled "From the Ashes," Nicole Brown of St. Joseph with "Heavy Like Floating," Maggie Bandstra of Grand Haven with "Nature Abstracted" and Vicki VanAmeyden of Augusta with "Objections: Democracy Under Pressure 2015-."

"The Menhir series depicts my long personal relationship with trees," Corazzo said in a news release. "These abstracted tree trunks illustrate my uneasiness with current destructive human interactions with nature by using texture of mass-produced objects for the bark. As time has passed, I saw these trunks becoming torso-like and began to add heads to remind us that we are one with the natural world."

Norris strives to involve her audience in her discoveries and the treasures she finds. She is drawn to the reaction of ink, paint, encaustics, oil and more on every possible surface.

Brown said of her exhibit, "This work is influenced by the many strong women in my life that I look to for inspiration and courage in my paintings. It is their presence and faces that grace much of my work, as does derivatives of myself. They help me tell the stories of the figures in the images I hear, and the poetry I have felt in my life."

The human connection to nature inspires Bandstra's paintings and pottery, according to the release. She extrapolates the simple forms and colors she finds in

IN BRIEF

There's improvisation here and there as inspiration strikes, then a firm reining in until his work is brought to conclusion, according to a news release. This can be a lengthy process – four or five or more reworkings before the desired result is achieved.

Judy Ferrara Gallery is open from noon-6 p.m. Thursdays through Mondays, or by appointment by calling 574-276-6001.

Wind Symphony presents 'Songs of the Sea'

BERRIEN SPRINGS — The Andrews University Wind Symphony will presents its fall concert, "Songs of the Sea," at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Howard Performing Arts Center.

The program also will be available to livestream on the music department's Facebook page.

The nautical theme stems from several pieces dealing with elements of the sea.

"Victory at Sea" was composed by Richard Rodgers for a TV documentary series in the 1950s documenting the operations and battles of the U.S. Navy in World War II.

"Amparito Roca" is a popular Spanish march, but ironically was likely not composed by Jaime Texidor, the listed composer. Instead, it was presumably composed by a British soldier, Reginald Ridewood, who was stationed at the Gibraltar military outpost.

Ralph Vaughan Williams originally composed "Folk Song Suite" with four movements, but later took out the second movement, "Sea Songs," and published it on its own. The piece will be performed with all four movements.

"Cajun Folk Songs" by Frank Ticheli brings to life two folk tunes of the Cajun culture. One of the songs, "La belle et le capitaine," tells the story of a young girl who feigns death to avoid being taken by a sea captain.

Tickets, which are free, are available only for students, faculty and staff.

For more information about the show, call 471-3560 or visit howard.andrews.edu.

Niles Scream Park to go dark for final weekend

NILES — Three interior attractions at Niles Scream Park – The Niles Haunted House, The Basement and The Cursed Crusade – will turn the lights out from 7-10 p.m. Nov. 6-7.

Experience the attractions in the dark, with only a glow stick to guide you.

The Field of Screams also will be open.

Reservations must be made at haunted.org.

plant life and the landscape.

She uses exaggerated scale, movement and patterns to deliver a healing message. She encourages viewers to take notice of the beauty in the world around them.

Professor, author and editor Toni Morrison said of VanAmeyden's exhibit: "All good art is political. There is none that isn't. And the ones that try hard not to be political are political by saying, 'We love the status quo.' ... (Art) has to be both: beautiful and political at the same time."

Completing the team of sleuths is Edwardsburg's Ellie Stankiewicz as Ashley Belmont.

Kat Paloyan, portrays one of the townsfolk, along with news reporter Wyatt Noack and vocalist Brittany Schesnuk.

Paloyan, a St. Joseph High School junior, read the part of Zelda Wilburn, the missing man's wife.

"I'm the child of the cast," Paloyan said. "I eventually want to major in playwriting and minor in music composition so I can make musicals. I want to be the person who creates 'Hamilton,' not the person who plays 'Hamilton.'"

Bennett earned an SMC music degree, and works part-time in the Office of Information Technology. He voices the gruff Wilburn, the monster and, between takes, "Family Guy," Beetlejuice and Disney characters.

Jamison Goetsch of Hastings plays Wilburn's business partner, Peter McCoy, who also vanishes. After completing a general studies degree, Goetsch hopes to transfer into film production.

Jacob Walker, a music graduate from Paw Paw who studies anthropology at Western Michigan University, pulls double duty as Philip Oldman and Sergei the Russian.

The performance will be posted online at www.swmich.edu.

HOROSCOPE

By EUGENIA LAST

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23

Call in favors, and put everything in place. Preparation will give you the confidence you require to take advantage of the changes heading your way. Knowledge and experience will play major roles in the way your life unfolds. Personal growth is featured.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Work on self-improvement and let others fend for themselves. Avoid demanding situations and arguments. Take precautions to maintain a healthy immune system.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Travel down the information highway. Gather facts, take care of unfinished business and plan for the future. Stop procrastinating. An unexpected visit will be eye-opening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be wary of anyone asking too many questions about your past. Being a little mysterious will play out in your favor when you face competition. Physical fitness will help you maintain good health.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Deal with friends, relatives and colleagues carefully. Don't let your emotions lead to poor decisions. A change may be overdue, but that doesn't mean you should make it now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Mull over your thoughts and feelings, but don't be too quick to share your plans. A change someone makes will be revealing. Spend time clearing up mental, physical and emotional clutter.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may think you know what's best for you, but before you take a risk, consider the repercussions. Overdoing it will result in setbacks. Play it safe.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Refuse to let the past infiltrate the present. A meaningful relationship will abruptly change if you say something insensitive. Concentrate on something that will benefit you as well as others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An emotional incident could interfere with your productivity. Say less and do more. How you handle your friends, colleagues and loved ones will determine how much respect you receive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Take care of what you have worked so hard to achieve. Offering your services to a cause will be enlightening. Refuse to let criticism daunt you. Stand up for your beliefs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your heart is in the right place, but if you are too generous, someone is likely to take advantage of you. An important relationship needs some tender, loving care.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Physical activities and hard work will help you stay out of trouble. Avoid arguments by keeping your opinions to yourself. Stay focused and take care of business.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take your ideas to the next level. Discuss your plans with someone who can help you reach your objective. Sharing a hobby with a loved one will improve the relationship.
